Uncle Sam Wants All His Taxes

Uncle Sam is not going to look with favor on part-payment of 1965 income taxes, the Internal Revenue Service's Los Angeles director announced this week. "There is no statutory provision in law for part payment or installment payment of individual income tax liability," Robert A. Riddell, Los Angeles district director, said. Unlike last year's forbearance when consideration was given in some cases of under withholding, Riddell said, this year's situation leaves no basis for failure to pay with the filing of a tax return. "Taxpayers who fail to pay any tax due when the return is filed will be subject to prompt collection action," he said.

Insufficient funds should not deter citizens from getting their returns filed by April 15, Riddell said. He encourages timely filing and prompt payment to avoid penalties.
